aparatus digitalis. Decreased esophageal motility is associated with aspiration in chronic obstructive pulmonary disease. To evaluate the relationship between esophageal body motility and gastroesophageal reflux (GER) in patients with chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD). A prospective study. University hospital in Sweden. One hundred eleven COPD patients (mean \pm SEM age, 69 \pm 2 yrs) and 55 control subjects (mean age, 58 \pm 2 yrs). Esophageal body manometry and 24-hr pH monitoring. Twenty-four-hour esophageal body manometry was successfully performed in 58 COPD patients (51%) and 20 control subjects (36%). Esophageal dysmotility was found in 22 COPD patients (37%) and in only 1 control subject (5%). All patients with esophageal dysmotility were using continuous positive airway pressure (CPAP) treatment. The amount of GER was lower in COPD patients with esophageal dysmotility than in those without (median number of reflux episodes, 37 vs 72, respectively; p = 0.001). HMD Global has reportedly begun talking to operators about the possibility of bringing the Nokia 8 to India in the near future. The company's boss, Rajeev Suri, has spoken of the Nokia 8, its plans and the rollout of Nokia phones in India, and it seems like the Finnish manufacturer has taken a step in the right direction. One of our sources claims that HMD has been in touch with Indian operators and will soon be talking to them about the Nokia 8. The source also says that the Nokia 8 will also come to India in the near future. HMD Global is also talking to the BB: Movistar India, according to a separate report. The Nokia 8 was originally set to launch
