PowerDNS is a free, open source distributed DNS service that provides a DNS server that is designed for robustness, speed, and features. It's also extensible and can be tailored to meet individual needs. PowerDNS is written entirely in the Perl programming language and is modular so you can add, delete, or modify the behavior of a feature without affecting other parts of the server. Supported DNS record types include: A, AAAA, CNAME, MX, NS, PTR, SRV, TXT and other standard data. PowerDNS can be run as a local service, on a remote machine, or embedded in another application as a standalone component. PowerDNS also supports multiple name servers on a single machine, so if one name server goes down, the rest of the servers can automatically switch to it, without losing users. PowerDNS can also run multiple instances of itself across multiple machines, to scale to large systems. It can run as a stand alone server, or integrated into an application to form a complete server load balancing and failover solution. PacketFence is a full-featured Linux firewalled, networking, and IDS solution, which integrates well with enterprise-class network topologies. It is built using modern technologies, and offers a complete solution for most common tasks. PacketFence supports filtering and inspection of both TCP and IP packet traffic, with both simple and complex rulesets. Policy management is also provided by PacketFence, using dynamic reconfiguration of firewall rules to keep your systems secure. GoogleDrive is a tool to upload, download, and organize documents, photos, music, and videos. It is designed to work on any computer. It stores your files in the cloud, and is compatible with other Google products like Gmail and Calendar. EasyCaptcha is a standard image captcha solution for ASP.NET. It has a lot of features, a simple interface and is scalable. EasyCaptcha is easy to install, easy to customize, and simple to use. PowerDNS is a free, open source distributed DNS service that provides a DNS server that is designed for robustness, speed, and features. It's also extensible and can be tailored to meet individual needs 2edc1e01e8

Version: 1.0 File credits: + [newtonzero] "The Network-Whois" (How to use? Simply click on the "File" -> "New" or "Open" buttons to connect to the domain you wish to search. A window will open which lists all the domains which are currently known to you. When a domain is selected the basic information will be displayed (IP, hostname,...) Additionally you will see the names of the DNS servers that are used to resolve the domain. In order to perform a proper query you must select the "Type" of query you want to perform, e.g. "IPv4". Once the query is done a graph is created showing the results, the size of the graph can be adjusted using the slider in the lower right corner of the window. The window is updated with the results when they are found. Notes: Each domain you register is cached for 24 hours Each IP is cached for 48 hours. The results of a single query are cached for 1 week. If a domain you're querying is listed in the cache the domain name is replaced by an IP You can modify the server list and e.g. show only the names of the DNS servers, by simply toggling the corresponding check boxes. IMPORTANT NOTE "NetAlyzer" will automatically open a new query whenever it's started, regardless if the previous query has found any results or not. You can stop NetAlyzer once it has found the results. Once the query has been stopped, you can choose to save the results. You can store any number of results into a single file, simply select a file and click "Save". New queries are automatically created every 24 hours. An "Add to cache" button is also added which will replace any matching DNS server IP by the name of the domain it's used to resolve. If you have two devices connected to the internet you can keep track of them by adding them to your favorites list. You can also create a "Favorites" list that will show you the list of the domains you favorited the most. You can edit the "F
